CDC's Cancer Prevention and Control Publications & Resource Materials

The Division of Cancer Prevention and Control (DCPC)

As a unit of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), DCPC plans, leads, and supports nationwide cancer prevention and control efforts. The division works in partnership with a multitude of organizations, including state health departments, federal agencies, academic institutions, associations, foundations, professional groups, and businesses.

Together with these partners, DCPC carries out programs aimed at preventing and controlling cancer among vulnerable populations and the public at large. Division programs and initiatives include the:

- National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program
- National Comprehensive Cancer Control Program
- National Program of Cancer Registries
- Cancer Survivorship Initiative
- Colorectal Cancer Prevention and Control Initiatives
- Ovarian Cancer Control Initiative
- Prostate Cancer Control Initiatives
- Skin Cancer Primary Prevention and Education Initiative

The Catalog

DCPC generates journal articles to advance the science of cancer prevention and control; and a variety of program-related publications to inform and assist program partners and to educate the public, health professionals, or other targeted groups about cancer prevention and control issues, guidelines, and practices. The Catalog is designed to promote awareness of—and facilitate access to—these resources among their intended audiences.

The Cancer Web Site—A Companion Resource

The DCPC Web site (<http://www.cdc.gov/cancer>), also known as CDC's cancer Web site, is a powerful companion to The Catalog. Printed copies of many of the publications highlighted in this catalog can be ordered online through the site's Cancer Publications Center (<http://www.cdc.gov/cancer/publica.htm>), and some publications can be viewed, printed, and downloaded from the site. The site provides a wealth of additional information, resources, and links relating to cancer prevention and control in general, and division programs in particular. For example:

- Cancer-specific journal articles authored by CDC staff can be found on the Web site; go to the Cancer Publications Center and click on "View a Listing of Scientific Publications."
- Contact information for state, territorial, and tribal programs funded through DCPC's cancer prevention and control initiatives is provided at <http://www.cdc.gov/cancer/procontacts.htm>.
